Content

Kitchenless City

Description:
The course is focused on the study of the hotel Waldorf Astoria of New York, outlining from this paradigmatic case study an overview of the history of new housing typologies with collective housekeeping services which appeared in New York on the verge of the 20th century. It covers the early days of the typology, from its origins until the First World War, stressing a special emphasis on the historical context in order to understand the reasons that influenced both the elimination of kitchens from homes and the subsequent creation of centralized domestic services.
