TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The proposed class on "Strategic Management & Innovativeness" promotes the interlocking between theory rooted in the strategic management frame and practical applications throughout the class sessions (2 hours per week). Accordingly, the student's involvement and commitment in both theory and practical sessions is critical to ensure an efficient learning process.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES OF THE SUBJECT

The core objective of this course is to equip students with the knowledge necessary for better understanding the conditions under which managerial actions and techniques embedded in the strategy-making's arsenal turn advantageous for the different units that form organizations.

The proposed course on 'Strategic Management & Innovativeness' embraces two areas: an exploitative approach to management, in which incumbent organizations pursue superior performance through the development and efficient implementation of different management techniques; and an exploratory approach to management that deals with the ways through which new businesses capitalize on their available resources and capabilities.
