Description:
Relations between sustainability and architecture. The perception of edges. The definition of sustainability. The Brundtland report. Sustainability and economy. Physic sustainability. The necessary condition. Material flows on architecture. Domestic residues. Materials of construction. The energy. The water. Sustainability measures. Furthermore, there are two more special sessions:
- In the first one, every student must propose the work that he is going to execute during the three weeks course.
- In the second one, the bibliography of the course is presented

Specific objectives:
To contribute in giving a definition of sustainable architecture based on the theoretical development created by the statement of the Buntdland report. To analyze the main characteristics of the resulting architecture and the investigation fields ready to developed.
The main objective is to make every participant able of reaching a perfect control of the analysis and evaluation of constructive behaviour in architecture, to finally evaluate its environmental impact. At the same time, it’s considered important to use properly techniques that fit on every case presented in the course.
